

Thanks For Your Business, Fairfax!

We continue our long-term mission of providing high-quality independent journalism, news and opinion for Fairfax County, Virginia.

It is no secret that the country's financial implosion had a major negative impact on newspaper advertising revenues. While we continue to navigate through a slow recovery, we felt it important to put rumors to rest by sharing our good news. The Fairfax Times is staying strong. We achieved a record year of sales and profit over the past year.

Our daily goal is to keep your trust as the independent source and voice you rely on. Your actions tell us that our journalism, content and accessibility are among the very best in the country. Indeed, we reach close to 60 percent of the adult population in Fairfax County. Our circulation is the highest it has ever been.

The Fairfax Times will remain vibrant because of you, our loyal advertisers. Strong communities need strong local newspapers to provide the "town square" necessary for effective self-government. The strength of our readership and the powerful impact of our advertising demonstrate the value you place on having an independent news and information organization serving this community.

We, together with our talented, mission-driven employees, are committed to serving you and Fairfax County each week, as we have for more than 30 years.

As a locally owned journalism/community-service business, it is a privilege to operate newspapers in our democratic system and to serve this region with local news and information that nurtures community. It is a stewardship we are proud of and which we plan to perpetuate for many years to come.
